The most difficult bond to break is that of family. The connection that a father has with his son is not like any other relationship they will forge. For Devin (African American) his male role model came in the form of Pop's, his grandfather. Pop's told him about his great grand father who was a freed slave and how their bloodline came to be. He taught him how to be a man and more than that he taught him how to love. That in the midst of the abusive home he was raised in his father's drinking and his mother's inability to stand up for her self and her child Devin could still be a good person. Now Devin is in the midst of the greatest moment of his life, he is about to become a father. But as he sits in his unborn son's room he wonders how he will explain to him that his grandmother is dead at the hands of his grandfather. How does he tell him that you can love someone and still decide that putting them in prison for the rest of their lives is the best decision for everyone involved? And through all that he still remembers moments of joy and love, he still knows that his father loves him. He still holds onto the values Pop's taught him but as a man and as a person he refuses to allow his son to live in the same shadows that he lived in. It is in the passing down of stories and sometimes artifacts that history is made. This piece is a brief moment in time for a young man to reflect on his life before he brings life into the world that was created for him.

Hannah Weston is a surgeon. She takes great pride in her job even reciting the doctor oath during surgeries but like all people Hannah has a story to tell. After finishing a surgery she shares her first experiences as a doctor as a child giving her mother stitches after her drunken father beat her. This continued for many years until her mother got the courage to leave her father, but she also left her behind. The abuse had already been a part of her life but got worse upon her mother's departure but Hannah never lost sight of her life goal, to be a doctor and she achieved it. It is not until a drunk driver is brought in that she realizes just how much unfinished business she has with her father. With the man laying on her table her mind begins to wonder if she could kill him. Finally realizing that this man isn't her father she operates on him and saves his life though in the car accident he caused five people died. She realizes that doctors do have the ability to play God, to give and take life, but she could not do it anymore. Immediately after this night her hand begins to have uncontrollable tremors that end her career but it forces her to deal with herself. It is in working on the inside that she finds the ability to once again breath freely and live day-to-day helping people in whatever way she can.

Some would say that the most difficult relationship is that between a mother and her daughter. In this collection we explore a damaged relationship between mother and daughter. In Sometimes the daughter expresses how more times than not she hates her mother. Within the poem she shares the nights of being homeless and not being able to feel like she had a home but it through the eyes of a child we are drawn to agree with her. In Adulthood Sucks the young girl has grown up. She is now a mother and living on her own. In her reflection she realizes all of the things that she now doesn't know because when her mother spoke she turned her off and didn't listen. How much easier would her life be right now if she has listened to her mother when she was a teenager? What did she miss? And finally, in Apology

Poem we see the next stage of this woman's life as she sits next to her dying mother and apologies for all of the things that she did and didn't do throughout her life. A coming of age story that reminds us to appreciate our parents and all of the advice they have to give because at some point in life, those wise words will drift away with the people that we called mom and dad.

On the morning of September 6, 2015 Stacy gets up and proceeds like any other morning. But unfortunately as her day progresses she finds out that there has been a shooting at her son's middle school.

As she watches the television frantic and frozen she realizes that she has to get to her son's school as soon as possible. Upon arrival she stands behind the barricades with all of the rest of the parents holding pictures of their children in hand, waiting to hear a word from the authorities. As time passes the all-clear signal is given and children begin to exit the school. Stacy watches as parents around her are reunited with her children. She asked one of the students if they know her son and the mother replies "He's shooter." Surrounded by a mob of angry parents without the ability to defend herself Stacy is brutally attacked. The one thing that she holds onto is the only thing that she has, a school picture of her son Andrew. She finally realizes what it was that took her son to do what he did, but by this time it is too late, for both of them. This performance is a mature and very real look into the horror associated with being a parent in the midst of a crisis and the realization that humanity is not always present and not always on our side.

One of the most challenging situations for teenagers in the present time is suicide. Preteens and teens are killing themselves or attempting to kill themselves at alarming levels. In this scene we meet

Kameron Beck, a teenage girl who has walked into her high school with a knife in one hand and a gun in the other. As she walks blankly down the hall she clearly has a purpose, to find the dark hall closet. She walks into the closet and the scene begins. This is not another school shooting, this is a suicidal teenager who feels safe in the one place that looks how she feels, dark and alone. The scene travels through different interactions in her present life: with her best friend who recognizes something is wrong but wants her to "get over it," her mother who loves her and sees her sadness. She tries to help her by listening and supporting her, but to no avail. Finally, we hear from Kameron who shares what she is feeling as her "voice" tries to push her to get the job done. This is a story that shows us the power of depression. It's not just about the suicide or the fear of a school shooting, it's trying to find the words to explain these feelings and why asking for help is so difficult.

Kameron is left with a choice: she can either choose life or death. As we hear Kameron's voice, the voice that lives within her as well as the reporter outside all of their emotions are real and present. (This scene comes with two endings for the performer or director to choose from.)

But when he starts working with the 2-4 year olds he is faced with a list of challenges: a lazy coworker, his mother that won't go away, children that are...different and an incident that turns Steve from worker to detective. The characters are fun and the story is hilarious. Steve ends the day with a job that he loves and realizes that being a teacher of sorts isn't half bad.

In a time when school shootings have become an unfortunate way of life a

teenage Rachel Woodard is living in her own private hell. The challenges of being a teenager, not being understood by her peers, not feeling loved at home and no one to talk to when the worst day of her life happens, she shifts, breaks and does the unthinkable. Often after these shootings in the midst of mourning those who lost their lives, the world wonders, "why?" More often than not this question is never answered. For Rachel, who finds herself a viral sensation when her classmates bully her, take unspeakable pictures of her and post them online ruining the little piece of self-worth she has left, she reaches out to everyone for assistance. No help from her schools' administration, no help from her peers but the most disappointing moment is the realization that her mom/dad doesn't care to support or help her. Sometimes the answers are right in front of us, but we don't want to see them, we don't want to take responsibility for being the person or group of people that could have made a difference in this young person's life and didn't. Her mom/ dad always wanted Rachel to be a "star." Sadly, when Rachel is waiting for her execution for the shooting that she orchestrated that day her mom/dad comes to visit, and a lot of these questions are addressed. In her final moment all Rachel wants it to be told by her mom/ dad that they love her. Instead their focus is on the crowd of reporters outside and how they can make this her shining moment as the first female school shooter. Hence, making her a "star."*This piece specifies that Rachel's mom or dad can be either or for the purpose of the

Some wonders what it takes for a child to lose their innocence. For the young woman in this story it started the day that her parents sat her down and told her that they were getting a divorce. She translated this into a situation where their divorce was not only her fault but that she wasn't a priority for them. She made it her mission to make their lives hell. Everything she cared about she let go of. Her classes, after school activities, no thing mattered anymore except making their lives hell. Then her best friend Brian who she has known all her life falls in love with her and she with him and finally someone loves her. His parents send him away and at fourteen she finds herself hustling her way from Texas to Arizona to find him. They end up living on the streets robbing people, in a Bonnie and Clyde kind of relationship. She then finds out she is pregnant. She wants the baby and without even a conversation Brian kisses her and walks out of her life forever. She makes the decision to immediately go home, finds the courage to ask her mother to allow her and her soon to be grandchild back into her home and with much joy her mother says yes. She does exactly what she said she would, she became the best mother possible. Her hope is that she can give Brian's mother some closure by telling her that he sends her anniversary cards every year. After speaking with her mother she realizes that the worst thing for a parent is to suffer through is the not knowing. Now that she is a mother, she truly understands that.

Hero stands before us as a beautiful, well-put together woman in her mid twenties. She is very well spoken and warm when connecting with the audience about her life. She is a conductor. Her love for music goes back to her mother who introduced her to classical music when she was still in the womb but it made all the difference.

Access Free Good Mother Elise Sharron Full Script

When she was young she witnessed her mother express her passion for music and express that when played correctly music was like poetry, in it s finest form. Her passion for music stayed with Hero her entire life, as did the demons that afflicted her mother, or did they? As Hero continues to share her life with us we begin to question if it is true or if it is fiction. Did she really go to college? Was she really the first woman to conduct the New York Symphony? Was any of this real or just a piece of her imagination that she captured from her mother? As the story unfolds we learn that Hero's mother died as a result of her fight with paranoid schizophrenia.

Hero has moments in the performance when she sees even speaks to other people who are not present to us. Even though the symptoms are there is her success as a conductor, her memory of her childhood and her present life, is it as real to us as it is for her? Is it possible to be sick with something as debilitating as paranoid schizophrenia and still stand tall at the podium and make music? As Hero conducts the passion is real. As she speaks her life is real. As she connects with the audience the story is real. But when someone is sick does truth bleed into fantasy so strongly that everyone involved is questioning, ¿ What is real? ¿ It is a beautiful story that makes Hero wonder if she is sick at all or if she is just a brilliant musician, creating poetry through music. It is quite glorious.
